INTRODUCTION

Carlyle has wisely said that a collection of books is a real University. Cicero described a room without books as a body without a soul. Marlow describes a library as "Infinite riches in a little room." Confucius, the Prophet of China, is said to have prided himself as a man, who "in his eager pursuit of knowledge forgot his food, who in the joy of its attainment forgot his sorrows and did not perceive that old age is coming on." There is an Arabic proverb, "The ink of science is more precious than the blood of Martyrs."

With these great notions about the value of books and library in my mind I took over the charge of the High Court library in 1336 Fasli and set about developing the collection which my distinguished predecessors in office had brought to 7,498 volumes, and which has been enhanced to 19,036 in 1351 Fasli. It is a happy coincidence that in the year 1303 Fasli my father, the late Mouvi Nizamuddin Hasan Sabab, the then Judge of the High Court, was entrusted with the supervision and re-organisation of the High Court Library and the first General Catalogue of books then compiled starts in his own hand-writing.

To-day our High Court Library which is mainly meant for the Judges and in which the Bar has been given the privilege of membership, stands as one of the best High Court Libraries in the whole of India. It possesses not only the Law Reports of Great Britain and the Dominions, but also one of the best collections of the American Law Reports. In addition to the literature on legal subjects, we possess a fairly good collection on History, Science and general topics, which helps a student of Law to have a literary perspective in his judgment as a judge and in his argument as a counsel. With such a vast treasure of books in our Library, it is hoped that more and more stimulus will be provided to the readers for the acquisition of knowledge which goes a long way towards the development of mental faculties and the utilization to the best advantage of the fine collection of books we possess.

Sir John Hershell says, "If I were to pray of a taste which should stand under every variety of circumstances, and be a source of happiness and cheerfulness all through life, and a shield against its ills, however things might go amiss and the world frown upon me, it would be a taste for reading." May I recommend this to the best consideration of our members.

I have much pleasure in presenting to our members this exhaustive catalogue which will prove a means of easy access to the thousands of volumes collected in our Library.
